Report description:

There was strongly boosted interest in buying or adopting small mammals during the lockdown of 2020 as consumers with young children purchased hamsters, fury dwarf rabbits, or guinea pigs to keep them amused. Such animals are relatively undemanding as well as cuddly and easy for children to handle. Last year, the small mammal population continued to grow, benefitting from a prolonged pandemic home seclusion until spring of 2021, albeit at a much slower pace. This negatively affected the growth...
