Report description:

As Greece emerges from the pandemic with eased restrictions, consumers return to socialising and school and work outside of the home, reshaping growth patterns within snacks. Impulse purchases and on-the-go consumption are rising, and at-home consumption trends are falling. However, some habits die hard, and the pandemic-inspired tendency to replace meals with snacks is emerging as a trend that is pushing producers to adapt. Already-rising health consciousness has been accelerated by COVID-19 an...
