Report description:

Computers and peripherals witnessed its fastest retail volume growth rate in almost a decade during 2020, and continued to see growth (although at a much lower level) in 2021. This trend is set to end in 2022, as the impact of COVID-19 fades away. Tablets and printers are expected to see the steepest declines in retail volume sales, and global supply chain shortages will also continue to have a negative effect on retail current value sales of these and all other computers and peripherals in 2022...
