Report description:

The COVID-19 pandemic emerged in the country in 2020, when most Brazilians were still struggling to recover their lost purchasing power from the last economic crisis of 2015-2016. While the government's monthly emergency aid of BRL600 in 2020 provided a powerful injection into the economy that enabled many families to maintain their standard of living, it was only able to partially offset the effects of economic volatility. For this reason, trading down in terms of products and brands, and the p...
