Report description:

Volume sales of computers and peripherals are declining in 2022. The key trend affecting the performance appears to be the disruption of the supply chain which has a huge impact on prices. Shortages in supply, especially of entry-level models, are driving average prices up across categories in computers. This is leading to a migration from laptops to tablets, whereas within tablets consumers are trading up to products with more advanced features that can substitute a laptop. Within laptops, the...
