Report description:

Wearable electronics is sustaining its robust double-digit growth in 2022, following the trend seen since its introduction to Turkey just prior to the review period. While wearable electronics offers niche and higher-priced products, the sustained and strong growth seen is thanks to its coming from a low base. The audience for such products is mainly limited to higher-income consumers, almost exclusively city-dwellers. Sales of these products have also increased in line with modern lifestyles, w...
