Report description:

The Vietnam dental materials market is anticipated to register a robust growth in the forecast period, 2023-2027. Factors such as the growing old age population and increased awareness among consumers regarding the benefits of dental services are driving the demand for the Vietnam dental materials market. Rise in imports of dental equipment and instruments and the ongoing technological advancements in the dental implant manufacturing process are further expected to contribute to the market growth. The expansion of the Vietnam dental material market is supported by growing sales of dental services, including implants and surgical procedures, and rising production. Rising number of dental healthcare facilities, specialists, and professionals are expected to propel the growth of the Vietnam dental material market over the next five years.

The Vietnam dental materials market is segmented into type, application, end user, competitive landscape, and regional distribution. Based on type, the market is segmented into metallic biomaterials, ceramic biomaterials, dental polymers, natural biomaterials, and others. Metallic biomaterials are expected to hold the largest market share in the forecast period, 2023-2027. The use of implants and prostheses is rising, which contributes to the segment's expansion. Additionally, the metallic biomaterials have a broader application due to their qualities of high strength, capacity to resist plastic deformation, limited biocompatibility concerns, resistance to corrosion, and high static, which further facilitates segmental growth in the forecast period.

The major market players operating in the Vietnam dental materials market are 3M Company, Ivoclar Vivadent, Inc., American Orthodontics, FORESTADENT Bernhard Forster GmbH, and Dentsply Sirona Vietnam Co. Ltd., among others.
