Report description:

Home audio and cinema has been declining for over a decade in volume terms, and in many years also in current value terms. It was an inevitable trend which was probably most strongly driven by the expansion and evolution of mobile phones. Not only after the advent of smartphones, but from the time of feature phones, music began to be carried in the palm of the hand by younger generations. Smartphones accelerated the trend. At the time, consumers were already used to storing and listening to musi...
