Report description:

Wearable electronics is expected to continue to see double-digit growth in 2022. Activity wearables and smart wearables benefit from increased engagement in sports and other outdoor activities in the wake of the COVID-19 pandemic. Nonetheless, smart wearables suffer from a positioning as high-priced, non-essential products, which act as a detriment to sales. In order to combat this, the unit prices of wearable electronics have continued to fall as players and retailers try to sustain demand. Som...
