Report description:

Despite supply chain problems in the second half of 2021, sales of smartphones were high due to strong consumer demand for the iPhone 12 and the popularity of 5G handsets. The strong growth momentum is set to cool in 2022, with only marginal growth expected as consumer sentiment declines amidst unfavourable economic conditions resulting from a pandemic hangover and geopolitical turmoil. The status of the pandemic remains the biggest concern affecting smartphones in 2022, with ongoing supply chain issues.
