Report description:

At the start of the COVID-19 pandemic systemic analgesics, such as acetaminophen and aspirin witnessed a surge in usage as they were recommended by the Bolivian government as effective treatments to support Coronavirus sufferers and also as a palliative against discomfort and the possible effects of receiving the vaccine. With the significant reduction in COVID-19 cases in 2022 and the return to more normal life, analgesics experienced a slight decline in current value sales, although levels rem...
