Report description:

Computers and peripherals are expected to register volume decline in 2022. Several factors are contributing to this decline. When COVID-19 hit in March 2020, there was a surge in volume sales as people hurriedly tried to set up home offices. Computers and peripherals bought during that period do not need to be replaced as yet. In addition, continuing global supply shortages of key components such as semiconductors is limiting supplies and pushing up prices and this is a time when there is already...
