Report description:

Despite rising inflation, Croatians have been spared the sharp rise in consumer health unit prices seen in many other countries in 2022. Since the beginning of the COVID-19 pandemic, the government has limited price increases, unless there is a valid reason with strong evidence of the need to raise the price. This legislation continues to remain in power in 2022. As a result, consumer health prices are remaining quite stable with little impact felt by COVID-19 or the war in Ukraine. Shielded from p...
