Report description:

While the rate of growth in retail constant value sales (2022 prices) of consumer health slowed significantly in 2022, it remained robust. Eye care, vitamins and dietary supplements were the top performers. The former benefitted from the fact that screen time has increased significantly since the onset of COVID-29 in 2020, with increased smartphone use particularly notable. Meanwhile, heightened consumer interest in health and wellness, particularly preventative health, since the onset of the pa...
