Report description:

Having declined sharply in 2020, retail constant value sales (2022 prices) of digestive remedies began to recover in 2021, and this trend extended into 2022. However, retail constant value sales remained slightly below their pre-pandemic peak during the latter year. While measures intended to slow the spread of COVID-19 (such as wearing face masks) have had the secondary effect of inhibiting the spread of viruses and bacteria that can cause digestive problems, the stress induced by the pandemic...
