Report description:

During the pandemic and lockdowns, restaurants were closed for long periods of time. For some of the year, takeout and delivery was available but not in all locations. This caused a drastic decrease in eating out, so consumers ate more at home and cooked more meals, often leading to healthier or more balanced choices and decreasing some stomach issues or food poisoning. As most foodservice locations reopened in 2021 and consumers have return to dining out since, digestive medicines are expected...
