Report description:

Systemic analgesics has experienced a fluctuating performance since the emergence of the pandemic in China. In 2020, sales of systemic analgesics slumped by double digits due to the stringent measures that were taken to monitor retail sales of COVID-19-related products. However, as virus cases started to drop, an easing of restrictions and the lifting of suspension measures when the pandemic was deemed under control led to increased demand for systemic analgesics, with sales gradually starting t...
