Report description:

2022 saw COVID-19 have a reduced impact on sales of baby food as high inflation became the most important influence on category sales, contributing to the static volume growth and high value growth registered in the category during the year. The vast majority of baby food sold in Romania is imported although this did not have a huge impact on unit prices or growth rates in the category during 2022 as only minor fluctuations have been seen in the exchange value of the lei recently. The Romanian N...
