Report description:

Drinking milk products registered very high value growth in current terms during 2022 as high inflation and rising costs for manufacturers and distributors meant dramatic unit price increases. This put some pressure on demand, although the essential nature of cow's milk and the diets of many consumers and its status as a very traditional product meant that sales continued to increase as demand was only slightly impacted by high unit price growth. In addition, there was a rush to buy milk during...
