Report description:

Dry eyes can be caused by many factors, including poor air quality and reduced tear production. A growing number of consumers are suffering from dry eyes, with an ageing population playing a role in this. However, the largest contributor to dry and red eyes is increased screen time amongst all age groups. The amount of time consumers spend in front of screens has been increasing significantly with the increasingly central role of digital technologies in people's daily lives. Moreover, this proce...
