Report description:

Demand for wound care in China notably declined due to lockdowns and prolonged home seclusion following the emergence of the pandemic in 2020. As virus cases fell in 2021 and social distancing rules were eased, local consumers generally returned to their normal lives, with the resumption of previously restricted activities, such as in-person education and work and other activities outside of the home. Moreover, as the government promotes the importance of regular physical exercise to enhance the...
