Report description:

The most performed surgery in South Korea is for cataracts. According to the Health Insurance Review and Assessment Service, cataracts usually occur in people in their 60s or older. However, the number of consumers in South Korea in their 40s and 50s suffering from cataracts increased significantly in the second half of the review period. As a result, an increasing number of people are taking eye health supplements which contain lutein in an effort to prevent this issue. Furthermore, younger con...
