Report description:

Sports nutrition registered a decline in value sales during the pandemic as gyms were closed and people did less physical activity due to lockdowns. Sports nutrition is also considered non-essential and with COVID-19 being a major concern, consumers were spending their disposable income on products such as vitamins in order to boost their immune systems. In 2021, current value growth was higher, as life gradually returned to normal as people were out and about again doing exercise and gyms reopened...
