Report description:

KEY FINDINGS

The United Kingdom data exchange in healthcare market is anticipated to record a 28.64% CAGR during the assessment period, 2022-2028. Significant investments from the government and reformative healthcare strategies drive market growth in the region.

MARKET INSIGHTS

The United Kingdom National Health Service (NHS) is actively migrating to digital technology platforms to reform its healthcare delivery strategies. As a result, many patient portals have been implemented in ambulatory care facilities, clinics, and hospitals. These advancements have helped healthcare professionals and physicians to deliver efficient treatment nationally.

Furthermore, during the United Kingdom eHealth Week about the interoperability inside the NHS, a significant quantity of patient data is exchanged across the NHS, mostly through 61 local shared records across England. However, because it falls outside the physician workflow, most of this communication is limited in scope and time-consuming.

The NHS aimed to go paperless in all its healthcare settings by 2023, including primary care, emergency care, and others. Also, the NHS intends to roll out a digital health platform across the United Kingdom to provide health information access to all patients and healthcare services by 2024. Thus, proactive government measures are a major growth driver for the market.
