Report description:

In 2021, demand for analgesics increased, as consumers used these products as an effective countermeasure against the side-effects of COVID-19 vaccination, such as high fever and headache, or stocked these products in preparation for home treatment in case of infection due to the shortage of hospital beds. In 2022, analgesics is set to see a rebound from the additional demand in 2021, turning to current value decline. In addition, the demand for analgesics is set to fall as these products are us...

ANALGESICS IN JAPAN

KEY DATA FINDINGS

2022 DEVELOPMENTS

Analgesics faces decline after a strong year, also affected by consumers' infection prevention practices and slow recovery of inbound travel

Products that respond to concern about infection with COVID-19 and adverse reactions to vaccination are emerging

Topical analgesics/anaesthetic continues its recovery due to the appeal of its efficacy on specific areas and formula innovations

PROSPECTS AND OPPORTUNITIES

Analgesics set to see recovery, but volume sales expected to remain lower than in 2019

Steady domestic demand and a resurgence of inbound demand will continue to drive recovery for topical analgesics/anaesthetic

The proliferation of rival treatments is becoming a threat to analgesics
