Report description:

Gross consumer lending in Canada portrays consistent growth in 2022, recovering more fully to pre-pandemic levels. As the unemployment rate continues to decline and lenders use more aggressive strategies, the demand and supply of loans remains high, increasing both consumer credit gross lending and outstanding balance. The growth in new credit origination is mainly driven by younger consumers and card lending. In addition, as the economy gradually recovers from the effects of the COVID-19 pandemic...
