Report description:

A tough influenza season coupled with a new wave of COVID-19 following the lifting of New Zealand's restrictions has seen consumers flocking to pharmacies for remedies to boost their immunity, with this providing a boost to sales of vitamins in 2022. New Zealand has been slower to recover from the Omicron variant which hit the country in February/March 2022, with this being attributed to various factors including the slow uptake of the booster jab. With infection rates rising many consumers look...
