Report description:

Gross lending in Sweden registered positive, yet slower growth in 2022, as the uncertain economic environment, exacerbated by the Russian invasion of Ukraine, led to a decline in consumer confidence. In August 2022, the annual inflation rate soared to almost 10%, the highest in more than 30 years. With the prices of essential commodities such as electricity, fuel and food continuing to rise, as well as interest rates, many Swedes became reluctant to take on new debt.
