Report description:

COVID-19 has had a strong influence on consumer lending in the Philippines. The negative economic impact of the pandemic, and the economic uncertainty that has emerged in its wake and in the light of more recent global events, have put pressure on the household finances of much of the country's population. The inevitable result is that some Filipinos are now very reluctant to sign new consumer lending agreements at a time when serious doubts remain about their ability to repay debt, especially w...
