Report description:

Sales of edible oils have suffered from inflationary pressures during 2021 and 2022, registering among the most significant price increases among the basic basket of shopping. This has had a negative impact on demand, with some consumers switching from larger two- or three-litre bottles to more affordable 900ml bottles, with this pushing down volume sales as consumers have looked to reduce their use of edible oils in cooking. However, private label has benefited from this situation, with consume...
