Report description:

Retail volume sales of butter and spreads is expected to decrease during 2022, reflecting the declining population and the general trend of consuming less bread. At the same time, foodservice consumption is steadily rising following the removal of COVID-19 restrictions. Butter is by far the largest sub-category and saw only a marginal decline in 2022 compared to margarines and spreads. It was expected that butter would be negatively impacted by the pandemic whilst consumers switch to more afford...
