Report description:

Many categories within cooking ingredients and meals are set to see increases in retail current value sales in 2022, driven by unit price increases. In 2021, as manufacturers and retailers in Japan were trying to delay price increases as much as possible, price surges were not evident in most categories within cooking ingredients and meals, except for edible oils and mayonnaise. However, price increases have become inevitable in 2022, as the costs of logistics, packaging materials, and raw mater...
