Report description:

In 2021, consumers in Hong Kong partly resumed their social lives as restrictions started to ease, despite the lingering threat of the pandemic. The gradual reopening of foodservice outlets contributed to a rebound in demand for rice, pasta, and noodles through this channel, resulting in single high-digit growth. However, foodservice volume sales remained lower than pre-pandemic levels due to the significant declines the previous year. In contrast, retail sales marginally declined due to reduced...
