Report description:

The sweet spreads category showed an upward trend during the pandemic as consumers spent more hours at home and looked for alternative and tastier flavours to enrich their breakfast. Particularly in-demand were nut spreads such as peanut butter and almond butter, especially those that promised higher protein-content. At the same time, jams with high fruit content were in great demand. This has led to new launches in both categories. For instance, the company Value for Life Foods launched the new...
