Report description:

Mounting inflationary pressure had a significant impact on demand for cooking ingredients and meals during 2022. This was driven by lingering supply-chain disruption arising from the pandemic, which was exacerbated by the war in Ukraine, which led to a surge in commodity prices. While retail constant value sales (2022 prices) continued to rise, this was driven by a spike in unit pricing, with very little growth in retail volume sales. Edible oils saw the biggest impact from this inflationary wav...
