Report description:

Over 2022, the lifting of the restrictions to stem the spread of Coronavirus (COVID-19) in Indonesia created stimuli for the performances of staple foods categories in retail and foodservice. The resumption of work, school and social and leisure norms saw consumers return to the office and classroom and increase the frequency of their social occasions and activities. While this could push retail sales of staple foods, the return to pre-pandemic norms left consumers with less time to prepare meal...
