Report description:

The pandemic led to an increase in demand for some foods, and reduced demand for others, but hardly any category suffered as much from the restrictions of the pandemic as gum. This has mainly to do with the fact that face to face social interactions decreased sharply in 2020 and 2021, with the wearing of masks, working from home and the closure of clubs and bars. The fact that Germans met fewer people in these two years meant that fresh breath was far less necessary.
