Report description:

In 2022, Argentina faces economic instability, with one of the highest inflation rates in the world. Although the gross domestic product is set to see positive growth at the end of 2022, benefiting from the positive impact of agricultural exports, increasing demand in hotels and restaurants, manufacturing and construction, private consumption will continue to evolve at a lower rate. This will be due to decreased disposable income, increased costs for transportation, education, health and public...
