The hazardous area equipment market is projected to grow from USD 10.5 billion in 2023 to USD 14.1 billion in 2028; it is expected to grow at a CAGR of 6.1% during the forecasted period. Hazardous area equipment is mainly used in industrial applications as a part of the emergency management system and as intrinsic safe equipment to protect the workplace.

"Market for control products is expected to grow at highest CAGR during the forecasted period."

The hazardous area equipment market is segmented into six types of products cable glands & accessories, measurement devices, control products, alarm systems, motors, and lighting products. Control products mainly considered are solid state relays, surge protection, enclosures, signal conditioners, and power supplies. The key functions of control products are to effectively control power and protect circuits in explosive, wet, and corrosive environments.

"Hazardous area equipment market for oil & gas industry is expected to grow at highest CAGR during the forecasted period"

Oil & gas is the major Industry of hazardous area equipment since any damage to assets due to an explosion can lead to a high financial loss. The environment in the oil & gas industry is highly prone to explosives, and the use of equipment in this environment needs to be explosive-protected with all the necessary built-in safety standards. These standards need to be taken by installing effective and efficient hazardous area equipment such as measurement devices, control products, lighting products, strobe beacons, etc. that maintain safety standards and allow the smooth functioning of processes in the oil & gas industry.

"Market for North America is to grow at highest CAGR during the forecasted period."
