Report description:

Ukraine and Russia account for about 30% of global wheat exports and as a result of the ongoing conflict, international prices rose sharply in 2022 due to supply fears. Approximately 70% of the wheat that is used in flour production in New Zealand is imported, and while most of this is from Australia the effects of the constrained local supply caused by the war in Ukraine were felt in the country, as other nations started to look to Australia to bolster their supplies. This resulted in increases...
