Report description:

Supply chain disruptions and heightened inflationary pressure related to the COVID-19 pandemic have been a challenge across all packaged food and fresh food categories. As inflation continues to rise, especially in 2022, affordability has become a greater challenge for fresh nuts. Retail unit prices of nuts have typically been relatively high, and these prices saw substantial increases in 2021, and this has also continued in 2022. Food manufacturers have faced higher costs for inputs such as raw...
