Report description:

The unit prices of starchy roots have increased significantly in 2022, due to constant rises in the costs of production, and unfavourable weather conditions throughout the year. Similar to other fresh food categories, the farming and production of starchy roots has been significantly impacted by the constant rises in the prices of fertiliser and petrol due to the war in Ukraine. Another factor decreasing overall output and driving up the cost of farming starchy roots has been the inconsistent we...
