Report description:

Retail volume sales of vegetables recorded dynamic growth in 2020, along with the imposition of lockdown restrictions. However, the easing of the latter in the first half of 2021 led to a switch in the volume demand for vegetables back from retail to the foodservice and institutional channels. As a result, retail volume sales of vegetables declined in 2021, driving strong growth in foodservice and institutional sales following the reopening of the hospitality industry and the return of children...
