Report description:

Lockdown measures, including restrictions on movement outside the home and the closure of foodservice outlets, the move to remote working and distance learning, and concerns about exposure to the COVID-19 virus in public settings served to increase the prevalence of home cooking when the pandemic first hit China in 2020. This had a positive impact on sales of processed meat and seafood, serving to boost the performance of its packaging. The fact that people continued to work and study during the...
