Report description:

The Philippines took a number of measures to control the spread of COVID-19 that had a significant impact on sales of alcoholic drinks in the country. Firstly, the country imposed lockdown in much of the country, which included the closure of foodservice outlets, including bars and restaurants, as well as a ban on public gatherings. With drinking alcohol often seen as part of social occasions, sales did not simply shift to the off-trade, with both the on- and off-trade channels recording major u...
