Report description:

Sales of baby food grew substantially in Turkey in 2020 as the impact of the COVID-19 pandemic encouraged many households with babies, infants and young children to stock up on these products. This is a reflection of the status that baby food has generally as a category of essential staples that are indispensable for families with babies, infants and young children. After a significant spike in sales during the early stages of the COVID-19 pandemic, as many households stockpiled essential foodst...
