Report description:

Imaging devices saw a slight retail volume decline in 2021, and is expected to fall further in 2022. The category is still facing the impact of chip shortages and supply chain disruptions as a result of the global pandemic. The shortages became more severe from the second half of 2021, and were not greatly alleviated in 2022, as reported by many manufacturers in China, including Fuji. The chip shortage hit mid-range and low-end products from Sony and Fuji the hardest, with retro models and more...
