Report description:

Ice cream overall is seeing improved and strong volume growth in 2022, along with extremely rapid current value rises. The cost of milk has gone up by at least 50% and is leading companies to reduce the amount of dairy they use in their ice cream products. Soaring energy prices are driving up cooling costs for retailers, and companies are focusing on cost-efficient measures to manage. Ice cream and other frozen packaged food players usually support independent small grocers with electricity cost...
