Report description:

The staycation trend experienced a boom in 2021 as Singapore's border remained closed, while pent-up demand among local consumers to spend time outside of the home and indulge was evident. Prior to the pandemic, single-night staycations tended to be the most popular option among Singaporeans, but due to extended lockdowns and prolonged remote working policies, they desired a longer escape. This scenario particularly benefited luxury and upscale hotels, as local consumers looked to indulge due to...
