Report description:

Soups is set to record a relatively low retail volume growth in 2022. With soup being the largest single range within meals and soups, this will impact the category's overall performance, which will receive moderate volume growth, coupled with a very strong double-digit percentage current retail value growth. This value growth will result from increasing unit prices and the rampant inflation that accelerated following Russia's invasion of Ukraine in late February 2022.
